should a manger take if a sexual harassment claim is brought against him or her?	exacerbating the situation you should not engage in the behavior cited in the complaint. The NIH is committed to promoting and maintaining a work environment free from discrimination and retaliation. Reprisal for participation in the EEO process is prohibited. Therefore, any retaliation against the complainant is barred. It is strongly advised that any behavior that could be perceived as retaliatory be strictly avoided. It is imperative that you be supportive and cooperative of the resolution process and maintain a record of relevant communications and events.
What course of action should a manger take if the victim elects to not pursue the complaint?	The National Institutes of Health is legally obligated to investigate any potential allegations of sexual harassment once it is notified of its existence. Once management is made aware of potentially unlawful behavior it is duty bound to investigate regardless of the victim's wishes.
What course of action should a manger take if he or she witnesses sexual harassment?	Any manager who witnesses an act of potential sexual harassment is required to initiate an immediate administrative inquiry process. You may locate your employee relations specialist who can assist you in conducting an investigation by clicking the following link Employee Relations Contacts.
What course of action should a manger take if he or she learned of the sexual harassment via informal channels such as gossip or rumors?	To prevent sexual harassment in the workplace management must take a proactive, not reactive, stance to sexual harassment. Being proactive means adopting the NIH's zero tolerance harassment policy. Managers should investigate all allegations of sexual harassment regardless of how he or she was made aware of the allegations.

Area:	Key Points:
Victim	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The victim as well as the harasser may be a woman or a man. The victim does not have to be of the opposite sex. • The victim does not have to be the person harassed but could be anyone affected by the offensive conduct.
Harasser(s)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The harasser(s) can be the victim's supervisor, a supervisor in another area, a co-worker, an agent of the NIH, another NIH employee, or a non-employee who has a business relationship with the NIH.
Action(s)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Unlawful sexual harassment may occur without economic injury to or discharge of the victim. • The harasser's conduct must be unwelcome.

What You Should Know, but Probably Don't
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The NIH is automatically liable for sexual harassment that results in a significant change in an individual's employment status (hiring, firing, promotions, demotions, undesirable reassignment) regardless of upper management's level of knowledge.

- A victim's submission to sexual activity is not a defense to avoid liability.
- Sexual harassment is an abuse of power it is not an expression of sexual attraction.

How to Prevent Workplace Harassment

- | | |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Post the NIH's EEO policy in a highly visible physical or electronic location • Disseminate the NIH's EEO policy to everyone and often • Firmly and consistently enforce the NIH's EEO policy • Monitor behavior. Acquire a sense of what is normal and abnormal workplace behavior for your employees. • Respond to all allegations immediately. | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Once a manager is put on notice that an employee or applicant finds a behavior objectionable the manager should promptly put an end to the behavior • Treat all complaints seriously, consistently, and confidentially • Be sensitive but neutral. • Follow up with both the harasser(s) and the victim • Document your actions • Avoid even the appearance of retaliation. For example if an employee must be removed from the workplace do not remove the alleged victim |
